

40th Anniversary Spotlight:
INGENUITY

"Mars is there, waiting to be reached."
 ~ Buzz Aldrin, Apollo 11 Astronaut

From 2021-2024 the autonomous NASA helicopter, Ingenuity (nicknamed Ginny), operated from the Perseverance rover on Mars and successfully achieved the first powered, controlled flight on another planet. In the business landscape, ingenuity is the lifeblood of progress – driving breakthroughs, creating new markets and redefining industries. Executing on innovative ideas often requires strategic capital deployment and operational expertise, both of which are hallmarks of private equity.

At Hamilton Robinson, we understand the importance of nurturing a culture of ingenuity amongst our teams. For 40 years, we have identified and invested in companies that not only leverage the latest technology but lead the way in their respective industries. Combining ingenuity with a well-defined vision and a framework for growth has always given our partners a competitive advantage. Our latest successful exit with GrayMatter highlights the power of creativity and ingenuity, with earnings tripling and over 80 management shareholders sharing in the value that they were so instrumental in creating.

Just as it requires an entire team of savvy engineers to design and operate a helicopter on Mars, it takes a skilled and experienced team to stay ahead of the rapidly evolving private equity landscape. At Hamilton Robinson, we pride ourselves on our ability to anticipate market shifts and capitalize on emerging opportunities, ensuring that our investments are prepared to navigate and prosper in any environment. By leveraging our deep industry expertise, ingenuity and strategic insights, Hamilton Robinson has consistently delivered on our commitment to realizing the promise in small companies for decades.
